

eral hundred subjects, and their catalogues show an imposing list of artists and engravers, both of earlier and later times. We find here the names of Titian Raphael, Michael Angelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Correggio, Durer, Guido, Murillo Rembrandt, Van Dyck, Velasquez, Rubens, Salvator Rosa among the older artists. Artists of more recent periods are represented by the well-known names of Reynolds, Gainsborough, Ary Scheffer, Horne Bonheur, Landseer, Millais, Delaroche, Paul, Greuze, Hamon, Holman Hunt, Meyer von Bremen, Kniaz, Krask, and many others. Of the celebrated engravers we note the names of Tiepolo, Raphael Morghen, Edelick, Nanteuil, Longhi, Muller, Strange, Sharp, Wilke, Bartolozzi, Mandel, Desnoyers, Varin, Cousens, Thomas Landseer, Simons, Blanchard and Atkinson. The last decade has developed with amazing rapidity in our country an interest in and an intelligent appreciation of art; and it is in extending that interest and quickening that appreciation that the Heliotype Process, rightly directed, may play an important part. For many years to come most Americans must gain their chief knowledge of the masterpieces of painting through engravings. Many of the most celebrated engravings of great pictures have now become rare and costly, and are only to be seen in public galleries and large private collections. Here the function of the Heliotype Process begins; it comes to the aid of art, multiplies these costly and beautiful works, and brings them within easy reach of the whole public.

The publishers call these reproductions Heliotype engravings, and they produce them on a thick sheet of hand some paper of a uniform size of nineteen by twenty four inches, and at a uniform price of one dollar each. This low price is but one of the cardinal excellencies of this enterprise. These reproductions sustain most favorably the test of careful comparison with the original engravings from which they are copied. Of course accuracy of outline was to be expected from the nature of the process, as well as a preservation of the general characteristics of the picture; but such perfection of work was hardly to be expected as is shown in the more delicate contrasts of light and shade which constitute so much of the expression and effect of an engraving. If one of these dollar heliotypes were framed and hung upon the wall it would not be easy for anyone—even an expert in engraving—to distinguish it from a steel or copper plate print.

The publishers seem to be alive to the importance of this undertaking. They have established special agencies in each large city and town in all the Northern and Western states, every town with a population of over 10,000 inhabitants being provided with a heliotype gallery, where the pictures can be seen and bought. These arrangements are usually made with one of the most prominent bookstores in the town.

Mr. H. M. Robinson, of Danbury, is agent for these gems of art, and has a fine collection of them.

CONSTITUTION.

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—the fact often damages the utmost regularity of the bowel, and gives depression, fatigue, and mental prostration, which may often lead to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected other than a positive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE.

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the too frequent digestive contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as sick headache.

CALUTIN. Buy no powders or prepared Dr. Ayer's Liver Regulator, or any other—either with trade mark stamp and signature unbroken. No other is genuine.
